HEALTHCARE

As of 31 January 2021,
the cumulative number of reported
COVID-19 deaths of nurses in 59 countries was

2,710

Since May 2020, the International Council of Nurses has consistently called for the systematic and standardised collection of data on HCW infections and deaths. It is evidence that would help protect the safety of patients and HCWs. Regrettably, the continued under-reporting of such information means that the true extent of HCW infections and deaths will be much higher than ICN's data.

As of 31 December 2020, more than

1.6 million

healthcare workers* in 34 countries have been infected by COVID-19.¹

41%

In many countries, nurses are the biggest health worker group with COVID-19 infection. For instance, in Mexico, nurses correspond to 41% of confirmed HCW infections.²

ICN identifies a wide range in HCW infection rates across countries. At different points in time the average across ICN dataset has ranged 6-10%. HCW infection rates of up to 30% of all infections have been reported to ICN.

* The definition of "healthcare worker" (HCW) varies and is not standardised across countries. "Healthcare worker" refers to all staff who work in any healthcare facilities, encompassing but not limited to nurses, midwives, doctors, paramedical staff, healthcare assistant, hospital support staff and community health workers. The definition includes HCWs working in both public and private sectors.

 There is significant underreporting of HCW infections and deaths across countries and as a result ICN figures are highly likely to under report the true extent of HCW infections and nurses deaths.
