

Hoi Shan Fokeladeh, Policy Advisor, Nursing and Health Policy, International Council of Nurses

Hoi Shan Fokeladeh, RN, MScGH, BSN, DTN, has been with ICN since 2018. She is a global health professional with international health policy and clinical field work experience in both intergovernmental organizations and civil society. Her past work includes humanitarian policy and guidance for emergency operations and field experience with the refugee population in the humanitarian sector. Hoi Shan took a lead in data collection and analysis, tracking, and monitoring of COVID-19-related infections and deaths in nurses during the pandemic. She also develops ICN policy on a wide range of subjects including protection of the well-being of nurses in health emergencies, primary health care, immunization, and patient safety. She also collaborates closely with ICRC and other key partners in the Health Care in Danger (HCiD) initiative to safeguard healthcare in conflict and non-conflict settings. Hoi Shan is committed to advancing the nursing profession and developing strategies for global health issues.
